Hand, face and ear diagnosis are all part of the ancient mysteries of medical practices in TCM. Today ear diagnosis has spread all over the world; however, hand and face diagnosis are still hidden and almost lost.

Hand diagnosis and treatment is a method that analyzes the functional and organic changes of organs or tissues through the difference in shape, lines, regions, color and veins on hands. The practitioner then applies treatment accordingly. It is developed from TCM meridian, Ba Gua and hologram theories. It assists the practitioner to visually and dynamically observe health conditions, predict the tendencies of disease and, more importantly, effectively prevent and treat illness.

Course Notes: Held at Bastyr Kenmore campus, room 184. One hour lunch.

Instructor: Dr Fu, RAc, TCMD, PhD, studied hand diagnosis from Monk Guang Wen in Chengdu, China. He earned his doctoral degree in TCM in 2005 from the Chengdu TCM University. He has ten years clinical experience as a physician and acupuncturist and is a board member of Sichuan Reflective Association. He is currently a core faculty member at the Canadian Institute of TCM.
